SWANSON QUICK TO MISS PATRICK HENRY'S PICTURE

Protesters Substitution of Lincoln Painting for Likeness of Revolutionary Hero.

BRANDGEE TO THE RESCUE

Indignation of Virginia Senator Subsides When Informed by Library Chairman That Canvas Was Removed for Cleaning.

[Special to The Times-Dispatch.] WASHINGTON, May 11.—Discovering that a big painting of Patrick Henry had been substituted in the place of the Lincoln portrait in the Senate chamber, Senator Brandegee, chairman of the Library Committee, immediately initiated a letter of protest to Senator Swanson, who had been the first to suggest the change. Senator Swanson agreed that Lincoln was a great and noble man, but he objected to having down a portrait of Patrick Henry to replace it. With a Lincoln picture, particularly when Senator Swanson could locate Henry anywhere around the Capitol.

"No man ever rendered our country more efficient and distinguished services," wrote Senator Swanson. "No man ever did more for the cause of American independence than Patrick Henry, and I cannot acquiesce in any action that might be construed as lacking proper recognition of him and his services."

Everything was satisfactorily explained when Senator Brandegee formally replied. He wrote that "the portrait of Lincoln, recently acquired, has been hung temporarily in the place formerly occupied by the portrait of Patrick Henry, so that the artist may get a good light for the purpose of retouching the Lincoln portrait."

URGED 'BOLD AND AUDACIOUS' POLICY

of method when you cannot win by circumvention and prudence. I think that there are willing ears to hear this in the American navy and in the American army, because that is the kind of folks we are. There will have to come a new tradition into the navy which does not do new and audacious and successful things."

Wanted Campaign Pressed.

"The President also expressed his dissatisfaction with progress, then being made toward crushing the submarine campaign. "We are hunting horrors all over the farm and letting the next alone," he said. "I am willing, for my part, and I know that you are willing, because I know the stuff you are made of. I am willing to sacrifice half the navy Great Britain and we together have to crush that next, because if we crush it, we win."

The British Admiralty had met American suggestions with what had been done, said Brandegee, adding, "and I felt like saying, 'Well, nothing is going to be so systematic as nothing is being done.'"

An Unprecedented War.

"This is an unprecedented war, and, therefore, it is a war in which the conduct of a war like this, and, therefore, nobody ever before conducted a war like this. Here are two great navies—not to speak of the other—each with its own and the British, outnumbered by a very great margin in the navy to which we are at sea."

"Now, somebody has got to think this war out. Somebody has got to think out the way, not to do something different from what we are doing. I have come here to say that I do not care where it comes from, I do not care whether it comes from the youngest officer or the oldest admiral. I want the officers of this navy to have the distinction of saying how this war is going to be won."

Ready for Any Sacrifice.

"I am willing to make any sacrifice for that. I mean any sacrifice of time or anything else I am willing to put myself at the disposal of any officer in the navy who thinks he knows how to run this war. I will undertake to tell you whether he does or not. I know that I do not, but I will undertake to tell him in common with those who can do it, whether his idea will work or not."

Forget Word 'Prudent.'

"Please leave out of your vocabulary altogether the word 'prudent.' Do not stop to think about what is prudent for a moment. In the thing that is audacious to the utmost point of risk and daring because that is exactly the thing that the navy side does not understand, and you will win by the audacity of method when you cannot win by circumvention and prudence."

"I am not discouraged for a moment, particularly because we have not even begun and without saying anything in disparagement of those with whom we are doing this war. I do expect things to begin when we begin. If they do not, American history will have changed its course. The American navy and army have changed their character. There will have to come a new tradition into a service which does not do new and audacious and successful things."

FOUGHT ADOPTION FOR SIX MONTHS

Progressive development. As a result of this study, the policy was evolved, he said, that the United States must by 1925 have a navy equal to any other in the world. He approved this policy, and the direct result was the five-year building program of 1916, the naval secretary said, "an epoch-making measure."

LAUNCH OPPOSITION TO SEPARATE PEACE PLAN

Republican Conservative McCumber Declares That Adoption of Resolution Would Bring Dishonor on United States by Desertion of the Allies.

[By Associated Press.] WASHINGTON, May 11.—Opposition to the peace plan was launched today in the Senate on the Republican peace resolution. Senator McCumber, of North Dakota, Republican, a member of the Foreign Relations Committee, delivering the first salvo. Senator Hitchcock, of Nebraska, the administration spokesman, will follow tomorrow.

Adoption of the resolution probably next Thursday or Friday, was predicted privately by leaders on both sides. It was given exclusive right of way beginning tomorrow, and there were no indications of a prolonged debate.

Democrats Will Resist. When Senator Lodge, Republican, introduced the resolution today and announced that it would be pressed continuously, Senator Underwood, of Alabama, Democratic leader, stated that while most of the Democrats would "resist" the resolution, there would be no obstruction nor many speeches.

Senator McCumber opposed both Senate and House resolutions, both, he declared, would bring dishonor upon the United States by desertion of the allies. As a substitute, he urged his resolution to restore commercial relations with Germany, but conceded that it had no chance of adoption, because, he said, the lines of division between the two factions of this body have been cemented by partisanship and hardened by time. Senator Wilson was criticized by Senator McCumber, who charged the executive with chief responsibility.

this forward-looking policy, the witness asserted.

"This is conclusive evidence that the Navy department long before war was declared was alive to the importance of preparedness, and was taking every step toward that end," he added.

The vision of the President, Mr. Daniels also asserted, established the fact that he was "in advance of officers, vocal now, but silent then."

His call to the men of our navy to do the unexpected, Mr. Daniels said, was the incentive that led to the invention of the victory barge—enabling the navy, notwithstanding the discouraging attitude of British naval experts, to live up to its imperishable motto: "They said it can't be done. We have done it."

WILLIAM DEAN HOWELLS, AMERICAN NOVELIST, DIES

William Dean Howells, who was found employment as a printer, his first engagement being for $4 a week. After the war, he became established in a printing office again, but the son worked for him, but all the time he continued cultivating his talent for literature, especially for poetry. He would set up his poems in type and read them in print. He read and studied and wrote continually. His little desk and bookcase were near a window under a starlight, and he said in later years that he had never a more delightful or convenient place for his work.

A Poem Is Printed. By and by he sent his poems to papers and magazines. Some were printed, and some were "rejected." One of these early poems, however, was accepted by Lowell's work. In 1855, when Howells was 21 years of age, he published a joint volume of verse. This, Howells said, "became a book which has been unknown to fame." He afterward frankly admitted that he did not possess the true poet's gift.

For two winters—from 1855 to 1856—he resided at Columbus and the other associated editors and outside newspapers. He was then offered a position as city editor of a Cincinnati paper, and he accepted it. In that position he gave his prime attention to the literary notes and book reviews. It was at that time that he wrote his "campaign" life of Lincoln.

The writing of this "Life of Lincoln" was the turning point in Howells' life. In the first place it brought him money enough to make a trip to Boston, where he made the personal acquaintance of Lowell, Holmes and other eminent literary people and came in touch with the best literary circles of the time. In the next place it secured for him the position of American consul at Venice. His four years' residence at Venice was his real education. The knowledge of the world, the experience of men and manners he gained there, formed the main foundation upon which all his subsequent literary work was built.

When he returned to the United States he lived for some time in New York, engaged upon the Tribune and the Nation. In 1871 he went to Boston to be assistant editor of the Atlantic. In 1872 he became its sole editor and this position he held until 1881.

Since then he devoted his whole attention to literature. In 1871 he published his first and perhaps most successful novel, "The Wedding Journey." His two or three years' residence in Europe and his four years' residence at Venice were his real education. The knowledge of the world, the experience of men and manners he gained there, formed the main foundation upon which all his subsequent literary work was built.

His works comprise more than sixty novels, biographical and critical sketches and literary reviews and studies. Yale, Harvard, Columbia and Oxford have bestowed honorary degrees upon Howells during the later years of his literary career.

SAYS JOHNSON SUPPORT INCLUDES PRO-GERMANS

Dr. Henry A. Atkinson, of Boston, Declares Faces Seek to Get Even With President.

[By Associated Press.] WASHINGTON, May 11.—Dr. Henry A. Atkinson, of Boston, Mass., addressing today the Southern Sociological Congress, attacked the candidacy of Senator Hiram Johnson for the Republican presidential nomination, declaring that "Johnson represents all the forms and elements of disloyalty that fought the United States during the war."

Atkinson asserted, had rallied behind Johnson because of his attacks on the peace treaty, the league of nations and President Wilson.

"To a man, they are supporting him," the speaker continued, "because they believe that by voting for Johnson they are getting revenge upon the American government, and most of all upon its executive head."

"They are not all pro-Germans, but every pro-German in the country is a Johnson supporter. I have just returned from a trip across the country. Everywhere I went I discovered the same groups of disloyals who did all they could to impede American progress in the war, who repudiated the league of nations, who are solidly back of Hiram Johnson."

COURT TO CONSTRUCT WILL OF LATE MARSHALL FIELD

Article 20 Providing for Distribution of $75,000,000, Chief Point of Attack.

[By Universal Service.] CHICAGO, May 11.—Litigation to determine how the late Marshall Field intended his will should be construed was begun in the courts of Chicago today. An estate of almost $100,000,000 is involved.

Article 20 of the will is the chief point of attack. It disposes of $75,000,000. It gives two-fifths of the residuary estate to each of the two granddaughters, and one-fifth to the granddaughter, Gwendolyn Field, when they reach the age of 50 years. The estate, it was estimated, will have a value of $200,000,000 when the beneficiaries are 50 years old.

Captain Marshall Field, III, and Mrs. Nancy Perkins Field-Tree, widow of Henry Field, were the witnesses heard today. The crux of the case turns on the definition of "issue."

All cordially invited to be present.

This is a message to you from the big unusual furniture institution of this city, whose name and policies are so well known that you recognize instantly who is speaking.

Yesterday there came into our store a shipment of Living Room Furniture that was ordered so long ago we had almost given up the idea of ever getting it, altho weeks before this illustration had been made preparatory to an announcement.

But the Furniture is here. Davenports, Gate-leg Tables, Secretary Desks and Bookcases; Davenport Tables and End Tables; Fireside Chairs, Magazine Stands; beautiful furniture, and all ready for your inspection.

And now here is the big part of the message: Of course you know, if you read the market reports at all—and you do—that furniture, like everything else, continues to advance in price, and that many years will elapse perhaps before it is lower. You also know that things in stock that suit you are the things to buy. Need we say more? Hadn't you better see us without delay?
